Training for Small Businesses Essential Skills for Managers - Tuesday 17th October 2017

There is something different about being a manager, something that requires a step up in handling relationships with colleagues and in motivating teams. Managers also need to comply with essential legal requirements and to have an eye to wider business interests. They must often communicate both up and down the organisation.

This short course takes a look at those differences and introduces some techniques for developing the essential skills. It will include:

- What is different about being a manager?
- Leadership and management styles
- Essentials of motivation
- Introduction to team dynamics
- Managing change
- People and their problems
- Where to find the essential advice (including on the law)
